Seniors with Personal Experience Hold Far More Favorable Views of Prescription Drug Benefit

- By a 20-point margin, seniors enrolled in a Medicare prescription drug plan say they approve of the Medicare prescription drug bill.
- Among seniors who have enrolled, only about one-third say the benefit offers too many choices, far lower than among those who have not enrolled.
- Among seniors who have enrolled, percentage saying enrollment has been harder than expected drops substantially, with a majority saying enrollment has been easier than expected or as expected.

“Based on what you know about the Medicare prescription drug bill, do you approve or disapprove of the legislation?”
